880 SAVED AFTER STORM DRIVES STEAMER ON ROCKS

S. S. Uranium, Driven Far Out of Course, Wrecked on Reef; Rescue Ships Take Off All Passengers and Crew

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 12.—The steamer Uranium, of the Canadian Pacific company, bound for London, was driven far out of course by a heavy gale and wrecked on a reef during thick weather, about 100 miles from the coast. The ship was driven on a reef about 100 miles from the coast, and tonight is still held fast in the grip of the rocky shore. The ship is carrying 880 passengers, 100 to the cabin and 780 to the steerage. ADMINISTRATION PROBLEMS WILL KEEP CONGRESS BUSY DURING PRESENT WEEK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Problems of the approaching Democratic administration will hang over congress again this week. Tariff, currency and anti-trust legislation, characterized by President-elect Wilson as among the most important subjects that will come before him, are to be the center of hearings and investigations by house committees throughout the week, and will divide attention with the Democratic-Republican fight in the senate over President Taft's appointments, over 1,300 of which are awaiting confirmation.

The scope of currency and anti-trust legislation has not as yet been outlined in the house, although the subcommittee headed by Representative Carter Glass, which began a general currency reform inquiry last week, has opened its investigation with the announced plan of finding a substitute for the so-called Aldrich plan recommended by the national monetary commission which called for a currency system built upon the idea of a central bank. Prominent bankers and financial students are to be given a hearing.

The investigation by the "money trust" section of the banking and currency committee, which is to be resumed Tuesday, is also developing recommendations and providing information and recommendations that will have an important part in the preparation of any new currency laws, or restrictive legislation to be passed under the Wilson administration.

Vote on Archibald Case.
The vote on the Archibald impeachment case will begin at 1 o'clock tomorrow and 12 charges against Judge Archibald will be disposed of before adjournment.

The conclusion of the trial, which has occupied the attention of the senate continuously since the beginning of this session, will make way for the first active legislative work to be followed by efforts to secure a vote upon the resolution for a constitutional amendment that would restrict a six-year single term for the president of the United States. In both houses, the legislative work of the week will center largely about anti-appropriation bills.

Conferences are expected to begin soon between Democratic leaders of the house and senate over the terms of the tariff revision bills that are to be prepared for President Wilson's extra session in March. Actual preparation of these bills probably will be started before the present session is concluded, and the house committee on ways and means.

The Democratic fight in the senate against the confirmation of President Wilson's cabinet, Mr. Danahy was one of the original Wilson men and worked for the nomination of the president in a bitter struggle this effort. He is mentioned for the post-war. The short executive session, of postmaster general or secretary of the navy.

ments were confirmed, will be followed by other sessions wherein the struggle between Republicans and Democrats will be developed fully.

Other Hearings Scheduled.

Hearings before the house committee investigating the alleged combination, among shipping interests and steamship companies, will be renewed tomorrow. The special committee of the senate investigating campaign contributions will also hold a short session to interrogate witnesses alleged to have been connected with the acquisition by William R. Hearst of copies of the letters that passed between John D. Archibald of the Standard Oil company and members of the house and senate.

REQUEST TO DIVERT VAST AMOUNT OF WATER FROM LAKE MICHIGAN DENIED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—In an elaborate opinion dealing with the principal points advanced in the long series of arguments which were held last year at the war department, Secretary Stimson has denied the application of the sanitary district of Chicago for permission to divert from Lake Michigan 16,000 cubic feet of water per second, instead of the 4,167 feet, at present authorized.

The secretary finds that the increased provisions would injure navigation; that there is no necessity therefor; that the application could not be allowed without congressional authorization, and that Canada has a just right to protest against it, except upon approval by the joint waterways commission.

After reviewing the history of the drainage canal, the opinion cites the formidable opposition to the withdrawal of 16,000 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan, and refers to observations during the last 46 years, which show that such a drain would reduce the lake's level from 43 inches at the St. Lawrence river to 6.3 inches in Lakes Huron and Michigan at mean water level with a much greater lowering effect in lower water periods, when the additional shortage would be most keenly felt.

Would Injure Points on Lakes.
This reduction, it is said, would injure all the American and Canadian points on the great lakes, and at Montreal the river level, probably would be reduced 25 inches. The United States has spent more than $30,000,000 improving its lake harbors and more than 50 harbors have been improved by Canada.

Every drop of water taken out of Lake Michigan at Chicago, according to the secretary, tends to nullify the costly improvements as well as to inflict even greater loss upon the navigation interests.

The opinion asserts that the application rests solely on the alleged sanitary needs of Chicago, and that even the projected deep waterway from the lakes to the Mississippi would require not over 1,600 cubic feet of water a second.

In conclusion, the secretary asserts that the whole application, comes clearly under the jurisdiction of the international joint waterways commission rather than under the authority of an administrative officer.

MOTION PICTURE LOCATES GIRL MISSING 8 YEARS

GRAND JUNCTION, Jan. 12.—"Oh, there's my sister!" cried Mrs. Mary Babcock as she watched the figures cast upon the screen at a moving picture theater here last night. Mrs. Babcock declares she has not seen nor heard from her sister in eight years, and had no idea whether she was living or dead until she saw her picture in the moving picture drama. Mrs. Babcock notified the manager of the theater and he wired to the film producer to learn the missing woman's whereabouts.

DARTMOUTH MAY MEET STANFORD IN DENVER

DENVER, Jan. 12.—Denver is to be put on the intercollegiate athletic map in the biggest sort of a way if the present plans of the Denver Athletic club are carried out. The club proposes to hold an indoor track meet at the Stock Yards stadium some time early in the coming April between teams from Dartmouth college and either Stanford university or the University of California.

Negotiations are now pending between the athletic authorities of these three institutions. Dartmouth has already signified her willingness to send her crack track team here to compete with either the athletes of Berkeley or Stanford.

Dartmouth's team includes three winners of the last Olympic games, both Stanford and California have Olympic heroes, the principal one, probably being George Horne, the high jumper, who was disqualified by the Swedish judges because of his American style of clearing tape.

The Denver Athletic club also proposes to make the meet much broader in scope, if feasible, than the competition of the two teams alone by having the track teams of the various Colorado colleges compete during the afternoon, the Colorado winners to meet the victors of the Dartmouth-California contest.

Even this proposed program may be enlarged by having the track teams of the Denver high schools and the other principal cities of the state compete during the forenoon of the big athletic day. It is probable that this program would be enthusiastically taken up by the high school athletes as their work would be witnessed by the famous athletes and trainers, who would also give the youngsters valuable advice.

The proposed track meet has largely been due to the work of Roland G. Parvin, president of the Denver athletic club, who has long been a friend of Dartmouth college, although not a graduate of the institution.

Another big feature Mr. Parvin hopes to secure for the event is the presence of James Thorpe of Carlisle, the world's champion athlete, to act as master of ceremonies.

Aside from the athletes present, the meet would undoubtedly bring to Denver hundreds of college graduates of the competing schools, from all over the middle west. The meet would also prove most attractive to society, which would turn out in force to watch the collegians display their prowess.

An indoor meet for Colorado collegiate track teams may be held in the auditorium in Denver, February 22.

92 ENTRIES FOR CURLING

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 12.—Ninety-two rinks have entered for the annual bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association, which will open here on January 20. Besides those in Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota and Manitoba, entries have been made from Vancouver, B. C., Toronto, Ont., and Michigan. A new trophy has been donated by E. W. Hill of Minneapolis to be contested for in the international event. It is a silver cup more than three feet high.

CONFERENCE 10 MEET ON 16TH

DENVER, Jan. 12.—A special meeting of the Rocky Mountain intercollegiate conference will be held Thursday night at 7 o'clock in the offices of Dean George C. Manly in the E. & C. block.

Among matters which will come up for consideration will be the non-competitive football schedule, which now awaits only formal ratification on the part of the conference to become effective and a consideration of the conference rules. It was stated yesterday by Prof. O. C. Lester, that the printed rules do not conform in all their parts to the minutes of the various meetings and it will be necessary to make the two conform before the new book is published.

Utah has made a strenuous protest of their schedule for 1913, as arranged by the managers of the various teams, and it now appears possible that the Utah-Denver game will be cancelled to avoid unnecessary conflict. This would affect the local program to some extent, but Denver will probably take on some non-conference eleven instead, if a good team can be scheduled.

Tinker Thinks He Can Land J. Kling

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 12.—Joe Tinker, shortstop and manager of the Cincinnati National league team, who arrived in Kansas City today with an offer to Johnny Kling, catcher and manager last year of the Boston Nationals, was confident tonight that he would secure Kling's signature to a contract to play with Cincinnati next year.

He said he had made no direct offer to Kling today, but that he expected to name figures tomorrow.

"I believe Kling has several years of good baseball left in his system," said Tinker, "and I think we can come to terms. If so, he will be my mainstay behind the bat next season."

Kling, who announced at the end of last season that he had permanently retired from baseball, said that chances were 10 to 1 that he would not sign.

CENTRAL LEAGUE TO CUT OUT HALF OF ITS CLUBS

LEWIS HAUKE, Ind., Jan. 12.—On the eve of the annual meeting of the Central league, scheduled to be held here tomorrow, Louis Hauke issued a statement in which he declared the organization would be composed only of six clubs this year. Last year's circuit was made up of 12 teams.

M'Lean Wins Race at Chicago Ice Rink

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Robert McLean of Chicago, international ice skating champion, won the half-mile, mile and two-mile Illinois state championships (indoor) in the races here today, under the auspices of the Northwest Skating association.

W. E. Gunderson finished second in all three events. In the mile Gunderson finished 3 feet behind McLean. McLean took the lead at the start of the mile, but allowed Gunderson to set the pace after a hundred yards. McLean made his spur 200 yards from the finish, but Gunderson was ready and challenged McLean with a fine burst of speed. They finished so close that only the judges could decide the winner.

M'Carty in Denver; Tells of His Bouts

DENVER, Jan. 12.—Luther McCarty, who begins his season of theatrical performances with an exhibition at the Auditorium here tomorrow night, announced here tonight that he will fight, March 17, at Columbus, O. He says he will take on any men the promoters suggest, but he insists that the affair take place on "any" first, because it's his birthday, and second, because it's St. Patrick's day. McCarty says he may be one of the principals in a bout February 22, but that this is not yet certain.

A CAMERA ON A ROCKET

From the London Mail.
The German military authorities have adapted a novel aerial camera to use in time of war which is projected into the air by a rocket. A shell-like hood attached to the rocket contains a camera, a parachute and a gyroscope. The rocket is discharged and, when 2,000 feet high, the parachute is released and the camera is automatically released and the photographic plate exposed. The parachute and camera then fall to the earth. With the camera photographs of the surrounding country can be taken.

It was confidently believed, by friends of Governor Woodrow Wilson, that, if he were elected, no backward step would be taken in carrying forward the federal conservation policy inaugurated by Theodore Roosevelt. But since his election doubts have grown, which have been greatly strengthened by the cordial reception extended by Mr. Wilson to those Democrats who are urging the appointment as secretary of the interior of Governor Norris of Montana, one of the most rabid opponents of the federal conservation policy.

It is recognized by all friends of conservation that the state rights theory of conservation is, as Gifford Pinchot expressed it, merely the stalking horse behind which the enemies of conservation hide. If the forest reserves of Colorado, for instance, were turned over to the state, it would be but a short time until all their vast resources would be in the hands of the great trusts. Today all the power plants, that have in years past seized upon the waters of Colorado are being rapidly united into one great power trust.

And this power trust is especially active in the effort to break the power of the federal government over the vast undeveloped resources that still remain the property of all the people. Only the determined opposition of Secretaries Fisher and Stimson, and the veto of President Taft, prevented the appropriation by private monopoly of vast water power in Alabama; the bill giving away this property, without the slightest consideration for the right of the people, had passed both houses of congress.

It is not the desire of the conservationists to prevent development. But they do insist that in all new development the rights of the people must be preserved. Before any more of the people's water power is given away, for instance, the right of the government to regulate both rates and service must be expressly recognized, and the ultimate title must always remain in the government. That these terms will not prevent development is proved by the fact that one large corporation has just entered into such a contract. But, of course, if the big corporations can secure this vast wealth for nothing, what's the use of paying anything for it?

Mark Sullivan, the political editor of Collier's, rightly says conservation is the biggest question that will confront the new administration. In comparison with the great issues involved in it the tariff is trifling. For an unjust schedule may later be corrected, but the people's property, once alienated, can never be recovered.

All sincere friends of Governor Wilson hope that he will not tie his hands at the outset by the appointment as secretary of the interior of such a bitter anti-conservationist as Governor Norris, or by any man of that type.

THE PROGRESSIVE PLAN

A RATIONAL, scientific method of regulating big business is provided in the Progressive trust regulation bill, just introduced into the senate by Mr. Bristow of Kansas. It provides for a commission of seven, with regulatory powers over all corporations doing a business of more than $5,000,000 annually.

Modeled after the interstate commerce commission, it would give the industrial commission far greater powers than the railroad commission now possesses. The proposed measure has "teeth."

If, for instance, a corporation should refuse to obey the orders of the commission, the commission would have power to appoint a receiver, by whom the business of the corporation would be conducted pending reorganization.

Another provision would forbid a company to issue stock in excess of 10 per cent more than the value of the physical assets of the company, thus preventing overcapitalization.

The bill embodies the Progressive party's idea of trust regulation. It was charged during the campaign that the Progressives were a trust party, since they advocated laws that would break up the trust. As a matter of fact, the trust, the utterly oppose this Bristow bill, willingly accepting any number of prosecutions and dissolutions in its stead. For real regulation is the very thing that the speculative trusts dread above all things.

THE RAILWAY OUTLOOK

THE fact that new railway construction fell off in 1912 from what it had been in 1911 is taken in some quarters to mean that American railroads cannot build new lines, since capital refuses to invest, on account of the growing demand for government regulation. The new mileage constructed in 1912 was 2,997, the lowest since 1897. In 1911 the new mileage was 3,056, while in 1910 it was 4,122.

The Railway Age Gazette, however, does not take such a gloomy view of the situation as do some railroad men and financiers. "These figures," it explains, "are not a true indication of the present activity in railroad construction, for there is probably more work under way at present than at any time since 1907 (when the new mileage reached 5,212). Our records show that over 2,500 miles of new line are at present under construction in the United States and over 2,800 miles additional are definitely projected."

So it is not altogether true that capital cannot be secured for new railroad construction. Capital is undoubtedly shy of entering any strongly competitive field, where there are already sufficient railway facilities, but there is plenty of money for the building of lines to territory not adequately served by existing lines.

But the railroad construction of the future will tend to become increasingly the building of additional trackage for existing lines. Most sections of the country are now fairly well served by railroads. But the present lines, by the development of traffic, are being compelled to build second, third and fourth tracks. In 1912, 1,075 miles of second track were completed, while more than that mileage of second track is already under construction for 1913.

Both for new lines and second trackage, therefore, 1913 bids fair to be one of the busiest years the railroads have had. In 1912 there were large orders for new equipment larger than for many years, and even at that the roads will be compelled to place large orders again this year in order to keep pace with their traffic.

The restriction of railroad earnings to a fair return on actual investment, bound to come within the next few years, will undoubtedly result in temporary financial crises. But when the railroads are at last put on a sound business basis the present development of the properties is likely to go forward even more rapidly than it has in the past decade.

TO SOLVE DRY FARMING

ACCORDING to Aaron Aaronsohn, head of the Jewish agricultural experiment station in Haifa, Palestine, "wild" wheat may solve the problem of dry farming. Experiments conducted by Mr. Aaronsohn with 18 varieties of wild wheat lead him to believe that some day, and that not long distant, the arid highlands of New Mexico, the sun-parched plains of Texas, and other vast areas of so-called desert lands in the west may be converted into richly productive wheatfields.

And thus Palestine would vastly increase the yield now owing to it by the entire civilized world. And thus would the plains east of Colorado Springs be made richly productive.

HE WAS DRUNK

THE engineer had been drinking the night before and had slept less than three hours before the wreck on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad at Corning, N. Y., last Independence day in which 40 persons lost their lives and 76 others were injured.

This is the finding of the New York public utilities commission. Sixty-three per cent of the accidents investigated by the interstate commerce commission last year were due to mistakes on the part of employees. The "human equation" can never be wholly removed from industry, no matter how many the safety devices adopted.

Such discipline must be maintained over employees as to make an accident like the Lackawanna wreck impossible. Men who drink, or who refuse to take proper care of themselves physically, must hold no positions of trust in modern industry.

HITCHCOCK'S PREDICTIONS

IN the opinion of Postmaster General Hitchcock, the parcel post will be followed by government ownership of the express lines, then of the telegraph and telephone lines. This would be but following the almost universal custom of European nations. And the demand for government ownership of the express companies will grow rapidly if, as reported, the express companies reduce their rates to correspond with the parcel post rates, but limit the rate reductions to parcels of 11 pounds and under.

FROM OTHER PENS
CHRISTMAS GIVING BY PROXY.
From the Boston Evening Transcript.
The quick response to the various remedies for extravagant Christmas giving has shown that there is a large body of public opinion already hostile to this misuse of the holiday. The "Society for the Prevention of Needless Giving" is one method of approach; the generous offer of a Hartford man to match every cash contribution for Christmas charity up to a total of $500, is another. This explanation is surely a rational one.

There are lots of people here in this town who don't have fuel or clothes to keep them warm, they don't have enough to eat, their children never get a Christmas present. These are the people we want to help at this time so that this Christmas shall mean more to them than to us than it has ever meant before.

These things are in the air. The same idea has occurred simultaneously to a number of people; that if Christmas means anything, it means a time for remembering those less fortunate than ourselves. It certainly does not mean an exchange of gifts which has come in recent years to mean, in a number of instances, the unlovely features of an old-fashioned Yankee horse swapping. Some change in the ordering of these matters is imperative. Quite properly there is this general revolt against an extravagant observance which secularized what is essentially a religious festival. In many families this has already led to the doing away with any exchange of gifts. Between those who know one another and whose mutual regard is expressed in a hundred ways every day for more genuine than the giving of gifts, it is felt that there is no need of cumulating one another with articles which are neither wanted nor needed. Instead, the equivalent sum which might have been spent for a superfluous pair of embroidered bedroom slippers, has been invested in fuel for a poor family of the neighborhood—a gift by proxy. No one will contend that this is not more in keeping with the spirit of the anniversary. The day of extravagant Christmas is over. A more rational, a more fitting observance of the holiday is at hand.

CONSIDERABLE FALL.
From the Prescott Standard.
Mrs. Jason Cole, mother of Mrs. Lester Earnest, South High street, fell eight feet off a cellar stairway landing at the home of her daughter.

PERHAPS TO GET UNDER COVER.
From the Saturday Evening Post.
She was dressed in her usual uniform—a battered old beaver hat and a new, shiny book—and she seemed in a great hurry.

ESPECIALLY HER SUBURB PRESENCE.
From the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette.
The old fire of Calce is still there, it rings through the abandon phrases with all the force, ardor, coquetry and similes that has made her Carmen unequalled. The play of every feature, the abandon and bold gestures, the careless pose, the suburb presence, all the resources of her alluring art are merged into a perfect role.

WE SHOULD LOVE TO SEE IT.
From the Aurora, Ia. Sentinel.
Julius Jordan is busy putting a prime coat of paint on the walls of the interior of his garage. The next coat will be of one color about half the distance to the ceiling, after which he will run a stripe around the room and the remainder of the wall will be some other color. He also contemplates painting the front ceiling and otherwise improving the looks of the room.

A New Medicine for Regret
By RUTH CAMERON.
One of the two most futile and foolish wastes of energy in the world is to worry over the failure; the other is to regret the past.

The first is rather more common; the second rather more foolish. For whereas worry might possibly spur one on to action, regret cannot in any way affect the past. Things done are done. Things said are said. One cannot go back and undo what one has done. One cannot go back and undo what one has said. One cannot go back and undo what one has done. One cannot go back and undo what one has said.

And thus Palestine would vastly increase the yield now owing to it by the entire civilized world. And thus would the plains east of Colorado Springs be made richly productive.

HE WAS DRUNK
THE engineer had been drinking the night before and had slept less than three hours before the wreck on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad at Corning, N. Y., last Independence day in which 40 persons lost their lives and 76 others were injured.

This is the finding of the New York public utilities commission. Sixty-three per cent of the accidents investigated by the interstate commerce commission last year were due to mistakes on the part of employees. The "human equation" can never be wholly removed from industry, no matter how many the safety devices adopted.

Such discipline must be maintained over employees as to make an accident like the Lackawanna wreck impossible. Men who drink, or who refuse to take proper care of themselves physically, must hold no positions of trust in modern industry.

HITCHCOCK'S PREDICTIONS
IN the opinion of Postmaster General Hitchcock, the parcel post will be followed by government ownership of the express lines, then of the telegraph and telephone lines. This would be but following the almost universal custom of European nations. And the demand for government ownership of the express companies will grow rapidly if, as reported, the express companies reduce their rates to correspond with the parcel post rates, but limit the rate reductions to parcels of 11 pounds and under.

FROM OTHER PENS
CHRISTMAS GIVING BY PROXY.
From the Boston Evening Transcript.
The quick response to the various remedies for extravagant Christmas giving has shown that there is a large body of public opinion already hostile to this misuse of the holiday. The "Society for the Prevention of Needless Giving" is one method of approach; the generous offer of a Hartford man to match every cash contribution for Christmas charity up to a total of $500, is another. This explanation is surely a rational one.

There are lots of people here in this town who don't have fuel or clothes to keep them warm, they don't have enough to eat, their children never get a Christmas present. These are the people we want to help at this time so that this Christmas shall mean more to them than to us than it has ever meant before.

PAPER
By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "Al Good Old Earth."
Paper is the greatest known source of wisdom.
By means of paper wisdom can be carried to all parts of the world at the rate of 50 miles an hour. Paper enables a wise man to spend 70 years of his life in wisdom and to have up to date results of his labors in a five-pound book and leave it to posterity.

The world was wise before paper was invented, but only in spots. Paper does not produce wisdom, but enables it to spread faster than measles. Socrates was a great scholar, but when he produced a deathless thought he had to wait until a crowd had collected before he could craft it into language. It took more than a century for the wisdom of Plato to penetrate a few hundred miles.

After a philosopher has carved up a granite slab he generally had writers cramp.

Today his dialogues would be syndicated each morning and would appear before 11,000,000 readers in 128 newspapers, with local dramatic and novelistic adaptations required.

Before paper was invented, wisdom had to be printed on sheepskin, carved on stone or engraved on wax tablets. After a philosopher had carved up a granite slab he generally had writer's cramp, and if the world wanted to get help to progress it had to come to the tablet. Nowadays wisdom comes to the world. It looks in through the mail box in a thousand different forms and enters the front porch each morning. We can get all that Epictetus ever knew for 10 cents and Homer is far more widely known today than he was when the only way he could get at him before the world was to sing it.

Wisdom has also promoted love and marriage to a wonderful degree. Six thousand years ago a lover usually started handing out a love letter on a sheet of sandstone at the age of 15 and was lucky if he finished it before the girl was an old maid.

Paper has civilized the world, but it is now too cheap. If paper cost five times as much as it does now, Sunday papers would only be one-fifth the size and much of the information which we get in them would remain beautifully unwritten.

Some danger threatens you. When looking for thieves, beware of fire. After a season of annoyance, you will have some "wages" or "money" that will bring good fortune.

Those born today will be generous, brilliant and attractive, and will gain prestige and money easily. They should learn early the correct values of deeds and words, lest their heads become turned and they become self-complacent and unimpressive.

THIRTY YEARS AGO-TODAY
JANUARY 13, 1883.
Fort Collins was about to be changed from a town to a city of the second class.

Thermometers in different parts of the city showed six and eight degrees below zero.

City Marshall Beall was presented with a handsome gold pen and holder by the members of the police force.

THE HASKIN LETTER
IMPEACHMENT TRIALS
III—THEIR CONSTITUTIONAL ORIGIN
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

It is well known that the American system of impeachment of the civil officers of the United States had its origin in the English system of jurisprudence. In fact, so closely related are the American and English systems that the average brief in an impeachment case before the senate deals almost as much with English as with American precedents.

The main contention in the majority of the impeachment trials that have taken place before the senate has been the construction of the phrase, "high crimes and misdemeanors." The defense usually claims that these crimes and misdemeanors are only those that are indictable in courts of law. The contention of Judge Archibald is developed along that line. On the other hand, the house managers always, or nearly always, have contended that they do not refer exclusively to acts that are crimes and misdemeanors at law. And they have pointed to English precedent to prove this. They cite the case of a lord chancellor who was impeached for affixing the great seal to what was regarded as an ignominious treaty; of a lord admiral impeached for neglecting the safeguard of the sea; of a councillor who gave a king bad advice and drew off of state where the remedy could not have been applied by the ordinary courts.

Issue Was Result of Argument.
This whole issue was injected into the constitution as a result of an argument between Colonel Mason and Mr. Madison, both of Virginia, when the matter was pending in the constitutional convention. The draft, as it existed before this exchange of ideas, provided that impeachments should be for treason and bribery. When it was reached, Colonel Mason wanted to know why impeachable offenses should be restricted to treason and bribery. He pointed out that a charge of treason, as defined by the constitution, would not reach many great and dangerous offenses, and called attention to the fact that Hastings was not guilty of treason, and to the fact that attempts to subvert the constitution itself would not necessarily be treason.

He further added that since bills of attainder, which had saved the British constitution, were forbidden by the United States constitution, it seemed all the more necessary to limit the power of impeachment. Therefore, he moved an amendment in the shape of the addition of the phrase "or maladministration." Mr. Ed-bridge Gerry objected to this motion. Mr. Madison seconded the amendment, declaring that the employment of so vague a term would be equivalent to tenure at the pleasure of the senate. To him maladministration might mean any degree of bad administration that the senate might wish. Mr. Morris of New York replied that a four-year term would prevent maladministration, so the phrase would do no harm. But Colonel Mason declined to withdraw it and substitute for other high crimes and misdemeanors. That was acceptable to Madison, and it became a part of the constitution.

Many Varying Opinions.
The debates of the constitutional convention reveal many widely varying opinions concerning impeachments. Some members advocated a court of impeachment composed of the chief justices of all the state supreme courts. Mr. Madison objected to a trial of the president by the senate, especially in view of the fact that the power of impeachment was to be reposed in the house. He thought that this would give congress control over the president and keep him in fear of it. He wanted the supreme court to try impeachments, or at least to form a part of the tribunal that should do so. It is evident that Mr. Madison did not realize how party spirit was destined to prove a practical insurance against the successful impeachment of the president.

Mr. Morris insisted that the senate was the only proper tribunal. He thought the supreme court too few in numbers and too likely to be warped and corrupted. He thought the great danger that could come to the country would be legislative tyranny, and that to vest the trial of impeachments in the senate would not prevent the danger. He thought the danger of a tyrannical senate was more to be feared than the danger of a tyrannical house.

Penalty for Being Found Guilty.
The only effect a verdict of guilt in an impeachment trial can have is to oust the impeached official from office and to disqualify him to hold any office of honor, profit, or trust under the United States. But this does not preclude his being tried and punished for these offenses in the courts of the land. While the president is vested with power to grant reprieves and pardons for all offenses except impeachment, the constitution expressly prohibits his granting reprieves and pardons in cases of impeachment.

When congress has come to exercise its powers as the organ of impeachment, the house acting as grand jury and prosecuting attorney and the senate as the trial court, many constitutional questions have been raised. For instance, when the senate was sitting in the case of President Johnson, there was some question whether it was sitting as a court of law. The chief justice declared that the senate, sitting in an impeachment trial, was a different body from the senate sitting as a legislative body. But the senate, accepting that statement as true, still was unwilling to admit that it was in any sense a court, and passed a resolution declaring that it was sitting as the senate and not as a court.

In the Belknap case the question was raised whether an impeachment trial could be conducted by the senate in special session. After the matter was put to the senate in various forms, it finally decided that while the presence of the house is not necessary to an impeachment trial, proceedings can go on only while congress is in session. When the time for voting came in the Belknap case there was much controversy concerning the form it should take. The senators who wanted to vote for his acquittal did not want to do so on the ground that he was innocent of the charges brought against him, but rather upon the ground that he had resigned before the house voted to impeach him, was no longer a civil officer of the United States, and therefore not impeachable.

How Vote Is Taken.
A straight vote of "guilty" or "not guilty" is the rule in impeachment proceedings. The vote is taken by the yeas and nays, and the result is announced by the clerk of the senate.

YOUNG MOTHERS

No young woman, in the joy of coming motherhood, should neglect to prepare her system for the physical ordeal of birth. The health of both herself and the coming child depends largely upon the care she bestows upon herself during the waiting months. Mother's Friend prepares the expectant mother's system for the coming event, and its use makes her comfortable during all the term. It works with and for nature, and by gradually expending all the forces, muscles and tendons, involved, and keeping the breasts in good condition, brings the woman to the crisis in a splendid physical condition. The baby, too, is more apt to be perfect and strong where the mother has thus prepared herself for nature's supreme function. No better advice could be given a young expectant mother than that she use Mother's Friend; it is a medicine that has proven its value in thousands of cases. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for free book for expectant mothers which contains much valuable information, and many suggestions of a helpful nature.

Irishman by Name
Simon Rosenbaum
Prepares Speeches

By PHILLIP EVERETT.
LONDON, Jan. 12.—The Unionists have other reasons to feel as humble as Irish Heep. It takes considerable effort to make yourself look ridiculous in a country where the sense of humor is as poorly developed as in England, but the Unionists who got an Irishman with the peculiarly fatal name of Simon Rosenbaum to prepare their speeches have succeeded in making themselves the laughing stock of the country and when an Englishman makes the painful effort of laughing and does laugh he laughs long. Simon Rosenbaum will not be forgotten in connection with the Irish debate, as the man who held up to scorn the brilliant Unionist politicians who were not brilliant enough to prepare their own speeches. Undoubtedly Simon Rosenbaum is the most famous man in England today, though he probably does not appreciate the honor.

Head Caught in Door;
Man Kicked to Death

PARIS, Jan. 12.—M. de Vannoise, who owned a racing stable at St. Marcellin-Bruyere, was killed in a curious manner recently in the little railway station of Pont-de-Gennev, where he had gone to fetch a race horse which had been sent to him from Boulogne. M. de Vannoise was climbing into the box, which was on a siding, when two or three trucks came into collision with it.

The door of the box closed on M. de Vannoise's neck as he was looking out to see what was the matter, and the frightened horse inside kicked him to death.

Women Too Much Given to Ruling Their Husbands,
Says French Feminist

PARIS, Jan. 12.—Mlle. Adrienne Combray, a well-known French feminist, has expressed some novel opinions on the quality of women's work, which, she says, often falls owing to faulty education. "When women marry," she says, "they are far too much given to ruling their husbands, and even want to choose the color of their neckties." The lack of coolness often shown by women in times of danger she also attributes to their false education.

SUCCESSOR
THE FRED S. TUCKER CO.

We have purchased the Fred S. Tucker Stock of Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Linoleums, Window Shades, Curtains and Draperies. We are complete Home Furnishers, therefore we will add to our present stock Stoves, Ranges, Cooking Utensils and Queensware as soon as the stock can be received from the factories. Then we can furnish your home complete, or we will sell you one piece and on easy payments if you wish. In the meantime, we will sacrifice stock now on hand. Many beautiful pieces will be sold at one-fourth and even one-half Tucker's regular prices.

We have been in the Home Furnishing Business for twenty-three years. We know how to and will treat you right. You will like trading with us. We will appreciate your business. Come in and let's get acquainted. While the pleasure will be ours, we will see that you do not regret it. Yours to please,
